

SAGEMONT

PREPARATORY SCHOOL Clubs & Honor Societies

Clubs and honor societies on the Upper Campus serve to extend beyond the academic realm and connect students with the principles needed for success whilst instilling the values and fundamentals of scholarship, leadership, service, citizenship, and character. Students who strive to become involved in the student body and make a difference in their academic environment will greatly benefit from the intellectually sparking network available at Sagemont Prep.

Intellectual Curiosity & Creativity

Mindfully regarding our keen academic focus, the extracurricular body of Sagemont Prep acknowledges the limitations of the classroom setting and strives to serve as a home for deeper connection-making. Through intellectual exploration exceeding the bounds of the classroom, students gain the ability to challenge their leadership and collaborative skills by engaging with leaders in the community and broadening their skills of expertise through various academic and interest initiatives.

Analytical Thinking & Problem Solving

As active agents of change, students who hold membership in clubs and honors societies on campus have a great responsibility to efficiently and effectively address the complexity of rising issues and problems in our community and environment. Students are encouraged to provide service through creativity in order to find innovative solutions.

Collaboration

Individuals build relationships to support each other and collectively share ideas and strategies to meet their goals better and discover new opportunities.

Responsible Risk-Taking

Students experience reliability on independent exploration and student-powered confidence to better pursue new skills in partnership and leadership.

Reflection

Campus leaders continuously challenge and assess themselves by examining their progress, and strengths, reflecting on self-awareness, and striving for continuous improvement in intellectual and personal growth.
